THE SOLLARAN ARCHONATE

THE ATLAS OF SOLLARA

A PLAYER'S HANDBOOK

Being a true and faithful guide to the Book of Maps, the Backpack, the Market, the Party's Loot, and all else that the Adventurer may find therein.

FOR THE USE OF THE PARTY · KEEP IT DRY

BEFORE THE JOURNEY

A WORD TO THE ADVENTURER

Hearken, traveller. The Archonate of Sollara is wide, and no one walks it well without a map. Your Dungeon Master keeps a living atlas for this campaign: maps of the continent and its dukedoms, the town of Emmett, the inns and temples within it, and everything your party has learned along the way. It also holds the markets where you may buy and sell, the stash where the party's treasure is kept, and a backpack for each of you.

This handbook explains every part of it, in the order you are likely to need it. The atlas is for the party: what you write and buy is seen by your companions, and what your Dungeon Master hides stays hidden until the story reveals it.

THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE

This handbook covers what a player sees. Your Dungeon Master has further tools that are not described here, and the pages may change a little as the campaign grows. When in doubt, ask.

CHAPTER I

FIRST STEPS

"Know the door before you knock upon it."

The atlas lives on the web, so there is nothing to install. Open the address your Dungeon Master gave you in any browser, on a computer, a tablet or a phone. It is the same book on every device, and what one of you adds appears on everyone's screen within moments.

SIGNING IN

1. You will meet a gate. Press the button to SIGN IN WITH GOOGLE.
2. Choose the Google account your Dungeon Master knows you by. There are no other passwords and no new accounts to make.
3. The book opens. Your first name now sits on the button at the top right. Press it only when you wish to SIGN OUT.

The atlas is open only to the people your Dungeon Master has named. If the gate turns you away, tell them which Google address you used.

TELLING THE ATLAS WHO YOU ARE

The first time you write a note, the atlas asks for your NAME OR CHARACTER. It remembers it afterward, and a small change link lets you alter it. This is the name your companions see beside your notes and your purchases, and the name your Dungeon Master sees on your backpack.

ON A PHONE OR TABLET

Everything works by touch. Panels rise from the bottom of the screen and close with the ×. Documents turn with a swipe; maps are dragged with a finger and zoomed with a pinch.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> After your Dungeon Master updates the atlas, your browser may show the old pages for about ten minutes. Hold CTRL and press F5 (on a phone, reload twice) to fetch the new ones.

CHAPTER II

THE BOOK OF MAPS

The atlas is a book. Each page is either a MAP or a DOCUMENT, and the page's name appears beneath the title at the top. Turn the pages with the arrows at either edge, the folded corners, the ← and → keys, or a swipe across a document.

THE BAR OF ICONS

☰	CONTENTS	Every page in the book, nested as the world is. A dukedom opens into its towns, a town into its inns. Press the small arrows to open or close a branch, or a name to go there.
🔍	SEARCH	Find any place, page or scrap of lore. Press / from anywhere, then use the arrow keys and ENTER.
👥	PEOPLE	The register of everyone your party knows (Chapter VI).
📖	JOURNAL	The write-up of each session, folded by date (Chapter IV).
👑	RENOWN	How the party is regarded in each place (Chapter VII).
💰	MARKET	Shops, loot, trade, the Consortium and the houses of play and comfort (Chapters IX to XV).
🎒	BACKPACK	Your coins, what you carry, and every coin that moves (Chapter VIII).
🎯	PING	Point out a spot to the whole party (Chapter V).
🔥	TORCHLIGHT	Darkens the map, for night scenes (Chapter V).
📝	ABOUT	Notes on the current page, and the party notes written beneath them.

READING A MAP

- DRAG to pan, and use the wheel or a pinch to ZOOM. The compass rose in the corner shows north.
- Small marks on the map are PINS: towns, inns, temples and the like (Chapter III).
- A gold link in a document jumps to the place or person it names.
- The page number at the foot is the folio. ESC closes whatever is open on top of the book.

CHAPTER III

PLACES AND PINS

"Every pin is a door. Open it."

Press any pin on a map and a panel opens beside it. Press a town and you will find, in order, whatever your party has learned of it.

WHAT A PLACE MAY HOLD

- A description and sometimes a picture.
- The party's standing there, for towns and cities (Chapter VII).
- People here: those who may be found at this place, each a link to their entry.
- Shops here: the merchants and craftsmen of the place, each a link to its stock.
- Party notes: what you and your companions have written (Chapter IV).

THE ABOUT TAB

Every page has an About panel, opened by the book icon in the bar (or the tab at the edge of the map). It tells what the whole page is: the lore of a dukedom, the history of a city. It also holds the party notes for that page.

PLACES INSIDE PLACES

The Archonate is built of nested maps. A dukedom's map shows its towns; a town such as Emmett has its own map; and within it stand inns and chapels, each with floors of their own. Use the Contents, or press a pin that leads onward, to go deeper.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> Not everything is shown to you at once. Your Dungeon Master reveals pins, people and shops as your party discovers them, so a place may appear that was not on the map yesterday.

CHAPTER IV

YOUR NOTES

Beneath every pin, page, person and shop is a place for PARTY NOTES. Write rumors you have heard, suspicions you hold, debts you are owed, or the name of the innkeeper who overcharged you. It is the party's shared memory, and it is saved at once.

WRITING A NOTE

1. Open the thing you wish to write about and find Party notes at the bottom of its panel.
2. Type in the box. Press ADD NOTE, or CTRL + ENTER.
3. Your note appears under your name, for everyone in the party to read.

PRIVATE NOTES

Tick PRIVATE before you add a note and only you will see it, not your companions, and not your Dungeon Master. Use it for a character's secret, a plan you are not ready to share, or a reminder to yourself.

CHANGING YOUR MIND

You can edit or delete your own notes. You cannot alter anyone else's.

THE SESSION JOURNAL

The JOURNAL icon opens the story so far, newest session first. Each entry is folded up and shows its DATE AND TITLE; press one to read it. Beneath it you may leave a comment as a party note. Only the party's scribe writes the entries.

THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE

A note belongs to the thing you wrote it under. A rumor about the Duke goes under the Duke, and a warning about a bridge goes under the bridge. File it where you will think to look for it.

BEWARE

A shared note is read by the whole table. If your character is keeping a secret from the party, tick PRIVATE.

CHAPTER V

PING AND TORCHLIGHT

Two small tools make the map a table-top companion. Both appear only when a map is open.

PING: "LOOK HERE!"

Press the Ping icon, then press a spot on the map, or simply right-click the spot. A pulsing ring appears on every party member's map, with your name beside it, and fades after a few seconds. Anyone looking at a different page is offered a Go there button. Use it to say we are here, the ambush is there, or this is the bridge I mean. Press Esc to leave ping mode.

TORCHLIGHT

Press the Torchlight icon and the map grows dark, with a circle of light that follows your pointer or finger. It is for mood alone, ideal when the party is in a cellar, a cave or a crypt. Press the icon again to bring back the day.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> Both tools change only your screen or send a brief signal. They never alter the map itself.

CHAPTER VI

THE PEOPLE OF THE REALM

Press the People icon to open the Dramatis Personae: everyone your party has met or heard of, with their portraits, titles and descriptions.

GROUPS WITHIN GROUPS

People are sorted into groups, and groups sit inside one another. Emmett may hold The Roosting Crow, which holds its staff, and the Chapel of the Rising Sun, which holds its Sisters. Press a group's name to open or close it. The number beside it counts everyone inside. A group may also carry a renown standing of its own (Chapter VII).

FINDING SOMEONE

- Type in the search box to match names, titles, groups and places. Every group holding a match opens by itself.
- Press a name to read their entry: a portrait, a description, and the places where they may be found, each a link.
- An entry also holds the party notes about that person (Chapter IV).

SHOPKEEPERS

When a shop has a named proprietor, their entry appears here too, filed under the town's Merchants. The shop page links to them, and they link back.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> You see only the people your Dungeon Master has made known to you. A character you have not yet met is not in the register, and a name may appear there before you have learned all of their story.

CHAPTER VII

RENOWN

"A good name is a coin that cannot be stolen, only spent."

Renown is the PARTY'S standing with a place or a group, shared by all of you together. It is a number from −10 to +10, which falls into a named tier. Press the RENOWN icon to see where you stand, and press any entry to read its history, with the reason for every change.

TIER	FROM	WHAT IT MEANS (A GENERAL GUIDE)
REVILED	−10	Guards may arrest you on sight; no one will trade with you.
DISTRUSTED	−6	Higher prices, closed doors, and the Watch keeps an eye on you.
DISLIKED	−2	Cool service and the worse price; never the benefit of the doubt.
UNKNOWN	0	Nobody knows you. Ordinary prices, ordinary treatment.
RESPECTED	+3	Locals share rumors and lend a hand.
HONORED	+7	Discounts, free lodging, and an audience with local leaders.
EXALTED	+10	Heroes here. People take real risks for you.

WHAT RENOWN DOES IN THE MARKET

Each shop shows your standing and how it changes the shop's terms. Good renown lowers prices, up to a quarter off at +10, and opens the doors to better goods. Poor renown raises them (up to 60% more at −10) and holds the better goods back. Below −6, a merchant will not deal with you at all.

THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE

Renown is earned and lost by what the party does. Your Dungeon Master sets each number and writes the reason into the history. Each place keeps its own tally, so a great name in Emmett means little in the next dukedom. Tiers and wording may differ a little in your game, and a place may hold its own specifics.

CHAPTER VIII

YOUR BACKPACK

"Carry what you can; count what you carry."

Every adventurer carries one BACKPACK. It holds your COINS (platinum, gold, silver and copper) and the THINGS YOU OWN. Whatever you buy, sell, bank or win passes through it. Press the BACKPACK icon in the bar, beside the Market, to open it.

WHAT YOU WILL SEE

- YOUR COINS at the top, and what they are worth all told.
- WHAT YOU ARE CARRYING, each thing with SELL... and GIVE... buttons beside it.
- HISTORY: every coin that moves, with what it was for and what was left. Nothing is taken or added without a line here.

Your coins and your history are seen by you and your Dungeon Master only. What you carry is no secret: your companions can see it in the Loot tab, under Claimed.

WHERE COINS COME FROM, AND WHERE THEY GO

COINS COME IN WHEN YOU	COINS GO OUT WHEN YOU
Receive them from your Dungeon Master: starting coins, rewards, your share of the party's coins	Buy goods, or pay for a repair or for identifying an item
Sell goods to a shop	Exchange coins, or buy a writ (Chapter XIV)
Withdraw from your savings account, or cash a writ	Deposit into your savings account
Win at a gaming house, or are given coins by a companion	Lose at a gaming house, visit a house of comfort, or give coins to a companion

SPENDING

When you buy, the price comes out of your backpack and the goods go in, in one stroke. If it does not hold enough, nothing happens (withdraw savings, sell spare goods, or ask your Dungeon Master). The atlas makes CHANGE for you, and spends platinum only when it must.

GIVING TO A COMPANION

Press GIVE COINS TO A PLAYER... in your backpack, or GIVE... beside a thing you carry, and choose the player from the list. You may give part of a stack, such as 2 of your 3 ropes. It is INSTANT: it leaves your backpack and lands in theirs in one stroke, with a line in both histories, and they are told when they next open the atlas. Only they can give it back.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> Your Dungeon Master can switch backpacks off, and on again. While they are off, the old way applies: a purchase is written to the ledger and you settle the gold at the table.

CHAPTER IX

THE MARKET

Press the Market icon (the coin purse) to open three tabs: Shops, Loot and My purchases. Shops are grouped by the place where they stand. Press one to enter it.

INSIDE A SHOP

- The proprietor and a word about the shop, and a line showing your standing and how it affects prices.
- The local market: what is cheap and what is dear in this town (Chapter XIII).
- The stock: each item, how many are left, its price, and a Buy button. A price struck through means it has been adjusted for you.
- A countdown: stock refreshes in so many days. Every shop restocks on Firstday, the first day of the calendar week.

KINDS OF GOODS

Plain	Everyday goods at everyday quality.
Fine	A better-made version, at double the price. Bigger towns have more of them.
Under the counter	Rare or special goods, offered only to customers in good standing. Otherwise you will read not for you, not yet.
House special	A thing this shop is known for.
Service	Lodging, healing, repairs and the like. It never runs out.

BUYING

1. Press Buy, enter how many, and confirm.
2. The price is taken from your backpack and the goods are placed in it (Chapter VIII). If you cannot afford it, nothing happens.
3. My purchases lists everything you bought, and what you paid.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> A larger settlement stocks more, finer goods and more rarities. A hamlet may have a handful of wares; a city has many. Shops of the same kind in different towns will not offer the same things.

CHAPTER X

HAGGLING

Every shop lets you HAGGLE ONCE A WEEK. Press the Haggle button and the atlas rolls a twenty-sided die for you, adds your character's PERSUASION BONUS, and reads the result against the table below. There is nothing to type and nothing to dispute: the die is cast in the atlas.

TOTAL	THE MERCHANT'S ANSWER	PRICES
5 OR LESS	Offended!	+20%
6 TO 9	Unimpressed.	+10%
10 TO 14	No deal.	no change
15 TO 19	A fair bargain.	−10%
20 TO 24	Charmed.	−15%
25 OR MORE	Won over completely.	−20%

YOUR PERSUASION BONUS

The first time you haggle, the atlas asks for your character's Persuasion bonus (such as +3, or −1). Enter it once. After that your Dungeon Master keeps it up to date as you level, so you will not be asked again.

HOW IT WORKS

- The result applies to EVERYTHING YOU BUY AT THAT SHOP until its stock refreshes, and also WHEN YOU SELL THERE, in your favor if you rolled well (Chapter XIII).
- You may haggle once per shop, per week (a week begins on Firstday). A different shop is a fresh attempt.
- Your companions haggle for themselves; one person's luck is not shared.

> BEWARE
> A poor roll makes things dearer, not merely the same. Consider carefully whether to risk it before a big purchase. If a roll goes badly wrong, your Dungeon Master can reset it, but ask nicely.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> Black markets keep their own counsel. They favor the people the law dislikes, so the worse your standing with the authorities, the better they treat you.

CHAPTER XI

THE SMITH'S REPAIRS

In the Archonate, every weapon and every piece of armor has three damage slots. When all three are spent, the item is broken and will not serve until mended. A blacksmith will repair it for gold, and the atlas works out the price for you.

USING THE REPAIR PANEL

Open a Blacksmith & Armorer and find Repairs above the stock.

1. Choose Weapon or Armor or shield.
2. Choose the item's rarity. Look the item up on D&D Beyond to find it. A plain sword is Common; a +1 weapon is Uncommon, and so on up the ladder.
3. Say how many slots are used: one, two, or three (broken).
4. Optionally name the item, so the ledger shows which it was.
5. Read the price, then press Pay for the repair. It comes out of your backpack, and the mending is instant.

Rarity	1 slot	2 slots	Broken	Smith needed
Common	2 gp	4½ gp	9 gp	Any village; a hamlet, if not broken
Uncommon	25 gp	56 gp	113 gp	A town or larger
Rare	150 gp	338 gp	675 gp	A city or larger
Very rare	800 gp	1,800 gp	3,600 gp	A metropolis
Legendary		Beyond any ordinary smith		A master, or a quest

Prices shown here are before your renown and haggling, which adjust them as they do any purchase. Each further slot costs a little more than the last, and a fully broken piece costs a little extra to rebuild.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> If a smith cannot work on your item, the panel says so and names the size of town to look for. That is a hint about where to travel next. You may also restore slots yourself by resting, by the rules your Dungeon Master gave you.

CHAPTER XII

THE PARTY'S LOOT

What the party finds is kept in one shared stash, under the Loot tab of the Market, until it is given to someone. What you buy goes straight into your own backpack (Chapter VIII). Anyone in the party may look into the stash at any time.

WHAT THE TAB SHOWS

- The party purse at the top: the coins held in common. Your Dungeon Master adds them and shares them out, and your share is paid into your backpack.
- In the party's Loot: each item with its quantity and value, and where it was found.
- Claimed: items a character carries. They are in that character's backpack now, and the goods you bought are listed here too.
- History: a running record of finds, claims, sales and identifications.

TAKING AN ITEM

When a character wants to keep something from the stash, tell your Dungeon Master, who will give it to your character. It leaves the shared Loot and goes into your backpack, under Claimed.

UNIDENTIFIED MAGIC

A magic item the party has found is not what it seems. You will see only what a character could see at a glance: a crystal set in a plain pendant, perhaps, with its value marked unknown. To learn what it truly is:

1. Visit a shop that offers Identify an item (Arcane Curios and temples do, for about 20 gp).
2. Press Buy on that service, choose which unidentified item to study, and confirm. The fee comes out of your backpack.
3. The sage takes it away. The item is revealed automatically the next time your Dungeon Master opens the atlas, and its real name and powers replace the vague description.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> You may not identify an item without paying for it. This is by design: magic in the Archonate is a puzzle, and the sage's fee is part of the price of knowing.

CHAPTER XIII

THE MERCHANT'S ROAD

"Buy where it is made, and sell where it is wanted."

Each town has its own market. What is cheap in one place is dear in another, so a patient trader may earn a little by carrying goods across the land. The atlas keeps count of all of it.

READING A TOWN'S MARKET

A shop's page carries a line such as "In this market: CHEAP wine, salt; DEAR silk, spices." Ten kinds of goods vary from town to town: wine and spirits, ale and mead, salt, spices, coffee, tea and perfume, silk and fine cloth, gems and jewelry, furs and leather, iron and ingots, and grain. Lynport is famed for its wine; Saltyard for its salt; the capital craves luxuries.

SELLING YOUR GOODS

1. Open your BACKPACK. Goods you bought are listed there.
2. Press SELL... beside the item.
3. Choose a shop. The list shows what each will pay; merchants who sell that kind of goods pay the most.
4. Read the offer. The atlas shows how it was reached, and whether it is a PROFIT or a LOSS on what was paid.
5. Press SELL IT.

The gold goes STRAIGHT INTO YOUR BACKPACK, and the sale is written under My sales in the ledger.

WHAT SHAPES THE PRICE

The item's standard value, what that shop pays for such goods (a merchant of the right trade gives about 85%), how much the town WANTS it, the party's RENOWN there, and your HAGGLE (a good roll now earns you more).

> BEWARE
> Selling at the town where you bought almost always loses money. The profit is on the road. Shops also have limits: each can pay only so much in ONE SALE and in ONE WEEK (see the tables), so a small town cannot buy a dragon's hoard. Plan your route, and your Dungeon Master may have plans for you on it.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> EXAMPLE. Fine wine is cheap in Lynport, where you pay 7 gp a bottle. In Saltyard, where it is wanted, a wine merchant may pay 11 gp. Five bottles earn about 20 gp, which is not a fortune, but the wine had to be carried there.

CHAPTER XIV

THE GRAND EXCHANGE CONSORTIUM

"Gold is heavy. Paper is not."

The G.E.C. keeps a branch in the great cities, and its marble counters offer four services. Whatever you open or buy there is YOURS ALONE. Every coin you pay it comes out of your backpack, and every coin it pays you goes into it.

CHANGING COINS

One gold is ten silver, which is a hundred copper. The Consortium changes any coin for any other and keeps 5 COPPER each time, so 1 gp becomes 9 sp 5 cp. Choose the coins and the amount, and the atlas shows what you will receive. The change is made in your backpack.

WRITS OF EXCHANGE

Pay the Consortium and it writes you a paper, good at ANY BRANCH IN ANOTHER CITY, so you need not carry the gold. The fee is 5%: a writ for 200 gp costs 210 gp. The writ goes into your backpack. To cash one, open a branch in a different city and choose CASH IT HERE; the paper is used up and its gold goes into your backpack. A writ in your backpack can be cashed only by you.

SAVINGS ACCOUNTS

Open an account at a branch, then deposit gold from your backpack and withdraw it back as you please. It earns 3% INTEREST EVERY 30 DAYS, and the atlas keeps the count in real time. An account works ONLY AT THE BRANCH THAT HOLDS IT, in the city where you opened it.

SAFETY-DEPOSIT BOXES

With an account open, you may rent a box. The rent is taken from the account each month, the first month at once. Each item you store is small, medium or large, and the box has room for only so much:

BOX	RENT A MONTH	IT HOLDS, AT MOST
SMALL	5 GP	4 small items, or 2 medium, or 1 large
MEDIUM	10 GP	8 small items, or 4 medium, or 2 large
LARGE	20 GP	16 small items, or 8 medium, or 4 large

Small is a potion, ring or pouch of gems; medium a dagger, book or lantern; large a longsword, shield or armor. Move goods in from your backpack or the party's Loot, or list your own things. If the account cannot pay the rent, the box is LOCKED: nothing goes in or out until you top up the account and pay what is owed. Your things stay safe.

CHAPTER XV

GAMES OF CHANCE AND HOUSES OF COMFORT

Some towns keep a GAMING HOUSE or a HOUSE OF COMFORT. Your Dungeon Master decides when they come to light, so you may have to ask about them. Both are paid from your BACKPACK or your SAVINGS ACCOUNT AT THE G.E.C. IN THE SAME TOWN (Chapter XIV): you choose with PAY FROM.

GAMING HOUSES

Choose a game, a bet and a stake; the atlas rolls for you. A win returns your stake times the payout shown.

GAME	HOW IT PLAYS
DRAGON DICE	Two dice. Bet on a high total (8 or more), a low one (6 or less), or exactly seven.
THE WHEEL	Twenty places: eighteen numbered, odd red and even black, and two green ones that belong to the house. Bet on a color or a single number.
CUT THE DECK	You and the dealer each cut a card. The higher wins, and a tie returns your stake.
THREE CUPS	Guess which of three cups hides the pearl.

THE HOUSE ALWAYS KEEPS SOMETHING, AND SOME HOUSES KEEP FAR MORE. An honest house takes a small cut; a crooked den tilts the tables. You can tell by the payouts: the same bet returns less at a greedy table. Each house also has limits, set by the size of the town. The smallest bet is 1 sp.

SETTLEMENT	LARGEST BET	MOST YOU MAY WIN IN A DAY
Hamlet	1 GP	10 GP
Village	2 GP 5 SP	25 GP
Town	10 GP	100 GP
City	40 GP	400 GP
Metropolis	150 GP	1,500 GP

The daily limit counts your winnings after your losses, backpack and account together. When you reach it, the house pays you no more that day, and a win that would pass it is trimmed to fit. A new day (by the calendar) starts you fresh.

HOUSES OF COMFORT

These come in four grades: SEEDY, COMMON, REFINED and OPULENT. The finer the house, the dearer the visit, the better the comforts, and the smaller the risk of a nasty surprise. You choose how long you stay (an hour, an evening or the whole night; a longer stay brings a stronger benefit), then pay. Each visit gives a RANDOM BENEFIT until your next long rest, and a chance (lower in finer houses) of an ailment. Your DM decides how it plays out; a healer or temple treats it for about 50 gp.

CHAPTER XVI

FESTIVALS

The Archonate keeps two great holidays. When your Dungeon Master declares one under way, or the calendar reaches its day, a BANNER appears at the top of the atlas, a short note greets you in the Market, and the shops fill with festival goods. Press the banner to go to the Market.

THE FESTIVAL OF THE SACRED HARMONY

Held once a year, on the seventh hour of the seventh day of the seventh month, when the Sanguine Sisters carry their crystals to the capital and the Song is heard across the land. Pilgrims crowd the roads. Look for white-and-gold ribbons and candles, pilgrim's rations, song-purified water, white festival robes, hymnals, blessings for the road, and, for those in good standing, a rare crystal-song shard at the temples.

BERTRAM'S RYE ALE FESTIVAL

Held six months later: a raucous, joyful contest in which brewers from across Sollara compete to be named Bertram for a year. Look for commemorative tankards, tasting flights of rye ale, entry kegs, rye mash, festival feasts at the inns, and, for trusted customers, this year's winning keg.

THE RULES OF FESTIVAL GOODS

- Festival goods are marked as HARMONY SPECIALS or FESTIVAL SPECIALS, and sit beside the usual stock.
- Rare specials are held back for customers in good standing, as with any under-the-counter goods.
- They are bought and carried like anything else, and they can be sold on.
- When the festival ends, the specials are gone. BLACK MARKETS TAKE NO PART in either holiday.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> Festivals pass. If something tempts you, buy it while the banner flies.

CHAPTER XVII

THE CALENDAR

The Archonate keeps one calendar, and the atlas keeps it for you. Press the CALENDAR BUTTON in the top bar (a small page marked with today's day of the month) to see the date, the season and the month, with today picked out in gold. Press any day to read about it, and the arrows to look at other months.

TWELVE MONTHS, SEVEN DAYS

A cycle is twelve months of twenty-eight days, or 336 days and forty-eight weeks. Every month begins on a Firstday, so the 1st, 8th, 15th and 22nd are always Firstdays and the 28th is always a Seventhday. The days run Firstday, Secondday, Thirdday, Fourthday, Fifthday, Sixthday and Seventhday. A date is written Seventhday, the 7th of Harmonis, Cycle 742 of the Archonate.

SEASON	MONTHS	THE MONTHS, IN ORDER
Summer, the Season of Founding	1 to 3	Artharis, Sanctaris, Luminor
Autumn, the Season of Revelation	4 to 6	Verith, Solarius, Judicar
Winter, the Season of Harmony	7 to 9	Harmonis, Sanguaris, Ordinus
Spring, the Season of Absolution	10 to 12	Absolaris, Vigilar, Ascendar

THE DAYS MOVE BY THEMSELVES

The calendar moves on one day for each real day, turning over at midnight (Eastern time), even when nobody has the atlas open. Your Dungeon Master also moves it on for a journey, a rest, or the days a repair or a building takes, and may pause it between sessions. If the date changes while you are looking, a note says so.

WHAT FOLLOWS THE CALENDAR

- Shops restock on every Firstday, all at once. The shop tells you how many days are left.
- Haggling is once per shop in each calendar week, so a new Firstday is a fresh attempt.
- Festivals begin on their own days: the Festival of the Sacred Harmony on the 7th of Harmonis, and Bertram's Rye Ale Festival on the 7th of Artharis. Each lasts three days, with its banner and its goods.

HOLIDAYS

A holiday is a coloured dot on its day. Five come with the calendar: the Day of Founding (1 Artharis), Bertram's Rye Ale Festival (7 Artharis), the Day of Reckoning (7 Judicar), the Festival of the Sacred Harmony (7 Harmonis) and the Final Benediction (28 Ascendar). Your Dungeon Master may add others, and may keep one hidden until its day.

> THE ADVENTURER'S NOTE
> Press Coming up at the foot of the calendar to see which holiday is next, and in how many days.

CHAPTER XVIII

TROUBLE AND REMEDIES

Should something go awry, begin here.

THE TROUBLE	THE REMEDY
The page is blank, or looks as it did last week.	Hold Ctrl and press F5. After an update the old copy may linger for about ten minutes. On a phone, reload twice.
The gate will not let me in.	Use the Google address your Dungeon Master knows. If a pop-up window was blocked, allow it and try again.
I see "Missing or insufficient permissions."	The atlas's rules need updating. Tell your Dungeon Master; nothing you did is wrong.
A shop, person or place is missing.	It may be hidden until your party discovers it. Ask.
I cannot haggle again.	One try per shop each week. The next Firstday, or a new shop, is a fresh attempt. Your Dungeon Master can reset one.
The shelves look different today.	Every shop restocks on Firstday, and festivals add and remove specials.
I bought something and cannot find it.	Look in your Backpack. Goods you buy go there. Services (repairs, identifying) leave nothing to find.
It says my backpack does not hold enough.	You are short of coin; nothing was taken. Withdraw savings, sell something, or ask your Dungeon Master. A new backpack starts empty, so ask for your starting coins.
I cannot give to a companion.	Backpacks must be on, and your friend must have opened the atlas once.
I cannot sell an item.	You may sell the goods in your own backpack. Found treasure is sold by your Dungeon Master, and what is in another's backpack is theirs to sell.
Nobody will buy my goods.	Some shops want only what they sell themselves. Try a general store or an importer, or travel to a town that wants them.
My safety-deposit box is locked.	The account could not pay the rent. Deposit gold, then press Pay what is owed. Nothing stored is lost.
I cannot cash my writ.	A writ is cashed at a Consortium branch in a different city from the one that issued it, and only once.
My savings account is not at this branch.	Accounts and boxes belong to one branch. Return to the city where you opened them.
I cannot play or visit a house.	You need coins in your backpack, or a savings account with money in it at the G.E.C. in the same town, and the house must have opened to the party. Ask your DM.
My note vanished.	Private notes show only to their author, so check that you are signed in under the same account.
